Overview
This online journalism bachelor’s degree builds foundational communication skills that are sought after in nearly any industry. Hone your writing and editing skills, learn to use digital technology to reach and engage audiences around the globe, and gain perspective on the role of media in our society.

Taught by expert media professionals with years of experience in the field, courses cover such areas as:
- Newswriting, magazine writing, and online storytelling
- Advertising, public relations, and marketing
- Video and photo production and editing
- Web design
- Media ethics, law, and history

This program places a strong emphasis on helping you find a career once you finish your degree. In addition to teaching you writing and technical skills, the curriculum includes requirements to give you first-hand experience in the field and the chance to build a professional portfolio.

- Complete an internship in a student media organization, through a study abroad course, or at an organization of your choice.
- Take a capstone class that:
  - Features guest speakers with experience in a variety of different jobs.
  - Teaches you how to embark on the search for a career with job hunting and resume writing techniques.
  - Helps you build a web-based portfolio of your work from classes and your internship.
