Overview
This online student affairs in higher education (SAHE) Master of Science degree prepares you for a career in student affairs through a curriculum taught by faculty who are both scholars and practitioners. Through the SAHE program, you will learn professional competencies needed to be successful in a wide range of settings on college and university campuses, including:

- Financial aid
- Admissions
- Student activities
- Advising
- Residence life

Through varied coursework and two practicum experiences, you will gain professional expertise that will help you succeed in an administrative capacity and increase your ability to manage, communicate effectively, and establish healthy and effective working relationships.

Topics of study include:
- Theories, assessments, and evaluations related to student affairs practice
- Cross-cultural and diversity issues within the context of higher education
- How diverse student learning, developmental theory, and research are relevant to students’ education and development
- Current issues and practices in the student affairs profession
- Administration functions and services in your choice of at least two distinct student affairs functional areas

Curriculum
While none of the classes have prerequisites, it is recommended that EDRM 698 – Research is taken in the first or second semester of classes. You are required to take at least two credits worth of electives during the course of your studies. Most graduate courses offered through Colorado State University Online qualify as electives for your degree, though all are subject to advisor approval.
